Sunset Crag – Echo Canyon

- The cliff is located directly across from the Hideaway, and is a 5 minute walk up through the trees from the creek bed. A trail can be found on the east side of the creek (behind the large boulder in the trees) from where the Lookout trail heads up the other way (west).
- The crag comes into the sun in the late afternoon (4-5pm depending on time of year) and is a nice compliment to the routes at the Hideaway. Good for a warm up/down from the Hideaway, chasing the sun or shade, or an after work session.
- Most routes are 5.10 or easy 5.11 with a greater variety of “easier climbing” than most other crags currently in Echo Canyon. The clean grey rock is very solid and riddled with features. The crag is capped by a yellow roof with a few token pockets and tufas. This keeps the crag reasonably dry during light rain. Most routes dry very quickly.
- A standard set of quick draws and a 60m rope is all you need. Most routes are only ~20-25m high.
- Trail and staging areas are a work in progress.

Routes - Left to Right

- Partially cleaned project
- Freezer Burn 8 bolt 11a (ring and long ring anchor)
 - Good varied climbing, the first route at the crag.
 - FA Ian Perry 2009
- Clearly Confused 7 bolt 10b, or 8 bolt 5.11/11+ extn (lower biner w 4 quick links and 6 inch chain off 2 bolts w hangers)
 - Steep lower half on good features and holds. Extension is clearly confused – too bad the cliff was not longer!
 - FA Ian Perry 2011
- Constant Variable 8 bolt 10c to 2 ring anchor; Even Odds 2 bolt 11b/c extn (rappel station w 1 ring)
 - Likely best and most sustained route at the crag. The 5.10 is really nice, and the extension is the icing on the cake!
 - FA Ian Perry and Chris Perry 2011
- Only Choice 7 bolt 10+/11- (to rappel anchor w 1 ring).....extn not yet complete
 - Crux dyno is easier than it looks, with a top out that is harder than it looks. What a tall person gains is quickly taken back! The bolting should keep people honest.
 - FA Ian Perry 2011
- Several partially bolted projects to right; likely to be finished off Fall 2013 or into 2014
